Cruise Baltic

One sea – oceans of adventures

Copenhagen

Many of Copenhagen's cruise passengers are likely to begin or end their Baltic cruise in the Danish capital and with up to 20 hours of daylight during the summer months and enough activity for every sun-filled hour, they can make the most of it by adding a pre- or post cruise stay. But even just a day off the ship offers a multitude of possibilities.

Cruise ships dock either at the Freeport Terminal or at Langelinie pier, centrally located within walking distance of the famous Little Mermaid and the city center. Outlets, a dedicated cruise information center and cafés are also found here.

As the capital of Denmark, Copenhagen is a relatively large and lively city, yet it retains a charming small-town atmosphere that is instantly appealing.

Kings & Tsars

Easy to get around in and small enough for most major attractions to be close together, Copenhagen is an ideal city to experience by foot or on bicycle. Start the day with a walk around the old military fortification of Kastellet, adjacent to Langelinie pier. Kastellet's moated defenses offer great views of the bay and city rooftops, not to mention a stop by the Little Mermaid sitting on the waterfront. Langelinie pier is also a central location within walking distance of the royal residence of Amalienborg – home to the oldest monarchy in the world – where the changing of the Royal Guard can be seen every day at noon. Rosenborg Castle, which houses the Crown Jewels, is also a brief walk away. If you prefer to just lean back and take it all in, jump on a Canal Tour that starts from Nyhavn, the old sailors' quarters by the big anchor near Kongens Nytorv. The tours, with multilingual guides, run every hour and last 50 minutes.

Modern Architecture & Design

The historic experiences offered by Copenhagen's past are complemented by spectacular modern gems of architecture that you can easily explore on your own. Built as an extension to the old Royal Library, the Black Diamond is a stunning black granite building overlooking one of the downtown canals, which can be reached by waterbus and on foot. Just a few more stops on the waterbus and the new Opera House can be experienced inside and out, or while enjoying refreshments in the Opera café or relaxing on the adjacent open area. Copenhagen is renowned as one of the world's premier design capitals and Danish design has an unmistakable presence all over town; however, the Danish Design Center, located directly across from the Tivoli Gardens, is a great way to experience most of it in a short period of time.

Copenhagen Jazz Festival runs 10 days every year in July.

City Life & Outdoor Events

A visit to the famous Tivoli Gardens is an experience for both children and the child within. Located in downtown Copenhagen, the gardens offer a fairy tale of adventure; fun rides, cafés and open-air concerts. At night the grounds and the lake are illuminated with beautiful lights and lanterns. Few capitals in the world can boast of water so clean that a city dip in the harbor is an attraction for both tourists and locals alike. One of the greatest summer highlights is held at the end of June when Danes celebrate midsummer, the longest day of the year. Bonfires are lit in parks, waterfronts and along the coast, and people picnic out to experience the long summer nights with the entire family.

Great Shopping & Fine Food

Copenhagen offers the world's longest network of pedestrian and shopping streets and squares. From designer shops and brand names galore along Strøget, to small quaint boutiques in the narrow side streets, antique shopping in Ravnsgade and the more upscale St. Kongensgade – shopping while strolling is a great way to combine Copenhagen experiences. Fine food is a broad concept in Copenhagen. Many locals would claim the classic hot dog stands in this category. For a slightly more sophisticated but truly local experience, the city offers several great restaurants where visitors can experience Denmark's famous open-faced sandwiches, better known as smørrebrød. The city center is full of cozy sidewalk cafés and boasts several Michelin-starred restaurants.

Ancient & Modern

Who are the Danes? At Copenhagen's National Museum, you can follow the history of the Danes from the rune stones of the vikings to the present day. The exhibitions depict everyday life and special occasions throughout the ages in Denmark, and also feature the many and varied lifestyles witnessed throughout the last 900 years. Copenhagen's excellent infrastructure makes it easy to take short trips beyond the city to get a feel for both ancient and modern experiences. The Open-Air Museum just outside Copenhagen is an open area built up with replicas of ancient houses and tools, and a great way to walk through history from the Stone Age onward. A drive north along the coast from Copenhagen should include a stop by Louisiana, one of Denmark's greatest museums of modern art, both in terms of location and art. A short trip west of the city and you can follow in the footsteps of the vikings in the former capital Roskilde, where a tour of the Cathedral and Viking Ship Museum is a must.
